22-ROOM MANSION IS GUTTED BY FIRE; BLAME BRUSH SPARK

Portion of Property Occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Walter Kiwi
AT TORRESDALE MANOR
Firemen Pump Water From Delaware; Furniture Saved by Neighbors

TORRESDALE MANOR, Mar. 27.—A 22-room dwelling, known as "The Mansion," a portion of which was occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Walter Kiwi, was gutted by fire on Thursday afternoon.

Most of the furniture and clothing of the Kiwis was saved as Mrs. Kiwi and neighbors moved them to places of safety.

The fire, it is stated, is believed to have started when sparks from a grass fire nearby ignited wooden shingles on the roof. The flames spread quickly, with the result that the roof caved in and the entire place was gutted. The large building is of stone, and is three stories in height. It is located at Edgewood avenue and River Road.

The Kiwi family occupied four rooms and bath on the second floor. Most of the furniture was taken out, although some was lost to the flames as was also a small amount of clothing.

Mr. and Mrs. Kiwi are staying for the present at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Davis, here.

Neighbors first saw the flames on the roof, and fire companies were summoned, among them being Cornwells Heights, Union Company of Cornwells Manor, and Newportville Company. Booster tanks were used, and water was also pumped from the Delaware River.

"The Mansion," said to be over 200 years old, was owned years ago by the Brookhurst family and later by the Bromley interests.

NEWTOWN
Robert L. Cooke, Jr., air cadet in the army air corps, after five weeks' basic training at the Air Force Technical School, at Boca Raton Field, Fla., was transferred last week to the University of California, West Los Angeles. DESTROYERS MIX WORK WITH PLAY
Warships Buzz With Rumors When Vessels Await Orders

SPARE TIME WELL SPENT
(Editor's Note: This is the last of five articles on the men and ships of the Royal Navy patrolling the Arctic Ocean to guard the sea lanes to Russia.)

(Distributed by L. N. S.)

AT A NORTHERN BRITISH NAVAL BASE in January (Delayed)—(INS)—The E, the F, and the I, three British destroyers on Arctic patrol, were in an Icelandic harbor, together.

Because our scheduled sailing had been postponed, the "buzz" was that the Tirpitz was loose, and we were waiting for her definite location before going into action.

The "buzz" or rumor, is a mainstay of life in the Arctic, with radio reception poor and newspapers unavailable. The "messdeck buzz" of the ratings is considered more interesting and variegated than the "wardroom buzz" of the officers, which is too often hampered and earthbound by the possession of some definite information.

Buzzes transfer Arctic destroyers to the Mediterranean or South Atlantic, bring the Tirpitz to sea periodically, or promise boiler-cleaning and refit in London, with 10 days' leave for all hands.

The Tirpitz buzz, I thought should provide a certain tension; but were they tense? Drake finished his howling on Plymouth Green before he went out to polish off the Spanish Armada. Here the destroyers, facing the prospect of meeting the Tirpitz, challenge

Walter K. Downs is Named Brewster Vice-President

JOHNSVILLE, Mar. 27.—Election of Walter K. Downs as operational vice-president of Brewster Aeronautical Corp. was announced today by Frederick Riebel, Jr., following a meeting of the board of directors, presided over by Henry J. Kaiser. Brewster has plants in Long Island City, N. Y., Newark, N. J., and Johnsville, Pa.

Dow, 40, goes to Brewster from the American Bosch Corporation, of Springfield, Mass., where he was assistant to the president. A "self-made man" in industry, with no formal engineering education, Dow is an outstanding protégé of the late Tom De Villbiss, famed Toledo manufacturer.

He is laughingly described by Mr. Riebel as the personification of "Blue Chip" Haggerty, a Saturday Evening Post character created by Ray Mithelland. Haggerty is a fictional production genius who irons out difficulties in war plants and gets things running smoothly by using his own magic touch in handling men.

Mrs. K. G. Moon is Named To Home Economics Post

DOYLESTOWN, Mar. 27.—Mrs. Katharine G. Moon has been appointed home economics representative for Bucks County, being named by the State extension office of Pennsylvania State College. She succeeds Miss Edna Stephany, who has been appointed as a dietitian in the medical department of the army.

A graduate of Pennsylvania State College in 1939, Mrs. Moon went to the Merrill-Palmer School in Michigan on a fellowship and also did graduate work in home economics at Temple University, Philadelphia.

Mrs. Moon was formerly home economics representative in Wayne county, where she had been for two years. Prior to that, she served as home economics supervisor in Delaware City, Del., for two years. Her home is in Flemington, N. J.

ENLISTS IN NAVY
Francis Corning, son of Mr. and Mrs. Matthew Corning, Pine Grove street, has enlisted in the U. S. Navy, and is now stationed at Sampson, N. Y.

2300 GIVEN WAGE BOOST AT ROHM & HAAS HERE

14% Wage Increase Dates From October 1, 1942

WAR BOARD APPROVES
(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON, Mar. 27.—A 14% wage increase for approximately 2,300 workers at the Rohm & Haas Co. plant in Bristol, Pa., was approved today by the War Labor Board.

The wage boost is retroactive to October 1st, 1942, when time and a half pay for Saturday and Sunday work was abolished by executive order.

The plant has four shifts and prior to October 1st, work was so arranged that, during a 20-week cycle, each shift worked a total of 14 Saturdays and 14 Sundays. The executive order thus resulted in a pay cut of 14%, which WLB restored.

Surprise Affair Given Here for Wm. Southrey

A surprise birthday party was tendered William Southrey at his home on Railroad avenue, Thursday evening, by a group of friends, in honor of his 12th anniversary.

The evening was spent playing games. Refreshments were served. William received many attractive gifts.

Those attending: LaVerne and Katherine Wren, Kathryn and Margaret Scott, Nancy Steiner, Grace Hinchcliff, Catherine and Joseph McInerney, Charles Jones, Robert Bowen, Alma and William Southrey.

Very Appetizing!
(By "The Stroller")

A Hulmeville woman worked industriously at her task at a defense plant at Emilie one morning, recently, eagerly anticipating her lunch and getting hungrier and hungrier by the minute.

Finally the lunch period arrived and she hastily tore open the bag, anxious to get to the contents and appease her appetite.

But the "lunch" sounded rather noisy as a steady ticking was heard. Cautiously she peered in, and to her dismay found she had in her rush picked up a bag containing an alarm clock.

HOUSEWIVES JAM STORES HERE IN SEARCH FOR MEATS, CHEESES; "DON'T EVEN ASK THE PRICE," IS GROCER'S COMMENT; ANTICIPATION OF RATIONING

"It's awful!"
This is the exclamation of a first ward grocer and meat dealer as he viewed the line-up of housewives in his store yesterday afternoon—all demanding food.

Smoked meats and cheeses receive the greatest number of calls, but according to two grocers "they'll buy anything you offer them."

And another comments: "They don't even ask the price today. If there is a ham to be had they say 'I'll take it,' then pay without question when the bill is tallied, so pleased are they to have secured some smoked meat."

The rush at all grocery stores is in anticipation of the rationing of meats and cheeses, etc., next week.

"Never a dull moment" is the manner in which a fifth ward butcher and grocer describes the drain on his stocks. "They come in by the dozens to ask for sharp cheeses or any other kind that is not rationed. Our store has been jammed, everybody hunting for meat and cheese."

A third ward merchant states however that although his customers are seeking meats they do not ask particularly for cheese. "Bristol is not much of a cheese town" is his comment. "Inquiries for it are no greater than usual." Meat he claims is very difficult to secure. "When I do get any meat my rule is 'first come, first served.'" The demand there has been for smoked meats mainly—pork butts and hams.

"It's just like a crazy house" is the expression of a first ward butcher and grocer. "Everybody wants ham, pork, goodies, or roasts of beef. In fact, they are buying anything that they'll take all they can get, whether it is American or Italian or any other kind of cheese."

The jam at a fifth ward store was viewed by one grocer, who commented that he couldn't figure where the people came from. "Most of them I never saw before. They even come on buses from a distance. And all seem to want hams—they are planning for Easter. If they can get a ham they are happy and never ask about the price."

As concerns the customers, one woman sums it up thus: "It has been taking twice as long to buy my groceries recently as it did before rationing, what with counting of coupons and waiting my turn, and the last few days have been worse. I don't know how long it will take when meats and cheese, butter, lard, oils, and other things come under rationing next month. I'll have to set aside a large part of my morning for shopping. This point rationing system is really a good idea when you consider that under it anyone has the same chance to buy food—but it does get you 'down' sometimes."

SURPRISE PARTY

TULLYTOWN, Mar. 27.—A surprise party was tendered to Fred Hills, Trenton, N. J., at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wright Carlen on Sunday, in honor of his 75th birthday anniversary. Guests included: Mrs. Carrie Hills, Trenton, N. J.; Mr. and Mrs. Ed Hills, Miss Charlotte Hills, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Johnson, Bordentown, N. J.; Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Houser, Miss Ruth Bailey, and Mr. and Mrs. Harry White, Bristol; Mrs. Elsie Carlen, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Carlen and Charles Carlen.

Bayonet Charges Drive Nazis From Positions

London—Bayonet charges by advanced units of the British Eighth Army have driven Axis troops from positions in the forward areas of the Mareh Line, the Algiers radio reported today.

"The Eighth Army is attacking the enemy with bayonets and has gained some ground," the broadcast stated.

Nazis Warn Captive Population How to Behave if Invaded

Washington—A Fighting French spokesman disclosed today that the Germans are posting bulletins on the streets and roadways of France, warning the captive population how to behave if and when the Allies invade the continent.

Many posters have been put up in Paris, the spokesman said, telling the people to remain in their homes three days if an invasion attempt takes place.

THREE HURT IN CRASH DURING BLACKOUT TEST

Two Cars Crash at Street Intersection in Newtown Last Night

NO INCIDENTS HERE

One accident in this area marred the blackout test held in Bucks County and throughout the State last night. Two persons were considerably shaken up and one was cut about the face and head.

The accident occurred at South Chanceller and Penn streets, Newtown. The injured:

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Tomlinson and Mrs. Walter Bohmler, all of Newtown. Mr. and Mrs. Tomlinson were considerably shaken up and Mrs. Bohmler was cut about the face and head.

The Bohmler car was being driven along Chanceller street when the Bohmlers and the Tomlinsons heard the air raid test signal. They immediately started for home.

A car occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Morris Satterthwaite was being operated on Penn street the Satterthwaites being enroute to turn the lights out at their store. The two cars crashed at the intersection.

The Bohmler car was damaged beyond repair. Mr. and Mrs. Satterthwaite escaped injury but their car was damaged.

The blackout test throughout Bucks County went off in good shape with the exception of the control center at Doylestown. There was a mechanical breakdown in the switchboard and only about one-third of the calls were received from the various sections of the county.

In Bristol the test was without any unusual happening. In the control centers throughout the county a series of exercises were staged in accordance with army instructions.

The State underwent its second blackout drill of the month last night when a 41-minute test was held.

The alert lasted from 10:29 p. m., when the blue warning was sounded, until 11:01, when the all clear was given. The red signal, indicating (in the event of an actual raid) that enemy planes were overhead, sounded at 10:36 and was followed 10 minutes later by the second blue signal. The all clear was indicated 15 minutes later over the radio and by the turning on of street lights.

It was the second blackout test under the new defense regulations which went into effect along the Atlantic seaboard on Feb. 17. A blackout was held on March 4, jointly with Maryland, Virginia and Delaware, and the new regulations received their initial test on Feb. 17 in a joint practice with Maryland and Virginia.

More daylight and night tests will follow. Eventually, it was stated, there would probably be a "double red" test. Rumors that there would be a double blackout this month proved idle.

Grass Fires Keep Firemen On Jump; Answer 7 Calls

Firemen were kept on the jump yesterday when the Bristol Consolidated Department answered seven alarms. All of the calls were for grass fires over a wide territory.

The grass fire at noon along Rodgers Road threatened to be a serious one as it spread rapidly over many acres of ground.

The flames licked the sides of houses and garages and in some instances houses along Mudtown Lane were blistered. One small shack was destroyed.

On a number of occasions garages were in the midst of burning grass, but the buildings were saved by the firemen.

Bristol volunteer firemen were also kept busy and answered many calls during the day.

WHAT OUR BOYS ARE DOING TO WIN THE WAR

FORT BENNING, Ga., Mar. 27.—Richard Charles Levers, of Bristol, Pa., and Richmond, Va., was commissioned a second lieutenant in the Army of the United States today upon successful completion of the Officer Candidate Course at The Infantry School at Fort Benning, Lt. Levers is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Levers, of Philadelphia, Pa.

The new lieutenant entered the army on August 19th, 1942, and served with the 7th Regiment, Camp Croft, S. C., before going to Officer Candidate School three months ago. He held the rank of Corporal before being commissioned.

At The Infantry School, world's largest institution of its kind, the local officer took a three months' course to fit him for his new responsibilities. The course covers the technique of handling all the varied modern infantry weapons and the tactics of leading small infantry units in combat. It also includes study of many varied subjects which future officers must know along the lines of administration, military law, etc.

The men who attend the Officer Candidate Schools are the best privates, corporals and sergeants from the entire army, selected by their superiors for outstanding intelligence and qualities of leadership. During the course even the mildly incapable are weeded out, so that the men who graduate with commissions are America's finest soldiers, fully qualified to be the leaders in our new army.

Today's Quiet Moment

(By the Rev. James R. Gailey)
Pastor, Bristol Presbyterian Church

Make us mindful, O God, of the needs of the world. Thou hast told us to live above the world, but at the same time to make the world a better place because of our having passed this way. So fill us with the spirit of Love that we might have compassion, even as Christ did, upon the human race—whether represented by our friends or foes, our allies or our enemies. Grant that the present world conflict may not blind us to the fact that we have a responsibility toward all peoples everywhere, and the burden rests upon thy Church to fulfill its obligation. Through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

the Grand Theatre. Mickey as the brilliant Andy Hardy is faced with a breach of promise suit that turns out to be a "frame" and otherwise is in hot water generally until he finally gets started for college.

As in the case of several of the Hardy pictures, the new one introduces a glamorous new personality in Esther Williams, national swimming champion turned actress.

BRISTOL THEATRE

"Tops all others in all its terrifying aspects," is the heralded critical opinion expressed on all sides concerning the new Bela Lugosi starrer, "Bowery at Midnight," due to start its shuddery showings Sunday and Monday at the

Bristol Theatre.

Hit No. 2 is the action thriller, "Invisible Stripes," starring George Raft and Humphrey Bogart. A story of a reformed convict's attempt to go straight.

RITZ THEATRE

Novel dancing routines attracting favorable comment by audiences at the Ritz Theatre where "When Johnny Comes Marching Home" is the current screenfare, were staged by the well-known Louis Da Pron.

Co-stars Gloria Jean, Peggy Ryan, Donald O'Connor and the Four Step Brothers are seen in the dancing sequences which highlight the movie's colorful romantic plot.

NEW BATTLE OF THE ATLANTIC

The United Nations are face to face with it now—the intensified U-boat campaign which Hitler has launched in a supreme effort to prevent an Allied invasion of the continent. In both England and the United States assurances are being given that this problem is in process of being solved. There are hints of secret weapons and techniques.

Even if Berlin exaggerates when she claims to have sunk half a million tons of Allied shipping during the first half of March, it is reasonably certain that losses have been severe.

It is obvious that should the U-boat campaign become as effective as the Germans boast it will, invasion of the continent would be hazardous if not impossible. The sinking of a million tons a month would be disastrous. Regardless of new tonnage that might be constructed to compensate for the loss, the destruction of guns, planes, tanks and equipment would leave potential expeditionary forces unprepared. New ships are useless if cargoes cannot be moved through the submarine blockade.

Notwithstanding the bitter prospect, this is no time for discouragement. Both Britain and the United States are ready to give the subs the worst mauling they have ever received. Improved coastal patrols have driven the packs into mid-ocean. Now fleets of destroyers, corvettes and other surface craft are being assembled to make it hot for any submarine pack that attacks a convoy. Small aircraft carriers will release swarms of planes to spot and help blast the U-boats with their depth charges.

Navy brass caps are not giving away all their secrets, but this can be counted on: The current Battle of the Atlantic will be one of the fiercest and one of the most crucial struggles in this entire conflict. The success of Allied arms on three continents depends to a large extent on victory over the Nazi submarine.

WAR PLANT ACCIDENTS

In so far as the public has been informed, sabotage in American war plants has been negligible since war was declared. But there is an indirect form of sabotage that accomplishes the same disastrous results. The National Safety Council asserts that, during 1942, an average of 11,000 American war workers were killed and injured on and off the job every day. This tragic toll is charged to preventable accidents, and three out of five happen while the worker is away from his task.

Five hundred million man-days were lost in war industries because workers were hurt. Had these men been on the job they could have built 23,000 Flying Fortresses. Another illustration of what the situation means is the statement that the loss was equal to a shutdown of the country's entire shipbuilding and aircraft industries for fifty-four days.

Determination to reduce the number of accidents to war industry workers has brought into existence the National Safety Council's war plan to conserve manpower. It is enlarging its influence throughout the country and hopes to arouse in employer and employee a realization that needless accidents help the enemy.

Shipping 150 cases of canned salmon to an Alaskan town whose sole industry is canning salmon might as well be followed by a consignment of walrus meat to the Eskimos.

Death Goes Native by MAX LONG

SYNOPSIS

When Hastings Hoyt, middle-aged bachelor, maneuvered his small boat into the cove and saw the Valley of Waimaka in Hawaii, it seemed exactly the refuge he was seeking. He expected to find only simple natives living under thatched roofs. But on shore, he was astounded when Josephine West, a beautiful white girl, attired in fashionable bathing togs, hailed him. She introduced the scholarly looking Mr. Budd who explained they are members of a colony of twelve white people "going native" in an attempt to forget the world's turmoil. Hoyt was invited to the cottages where he met lynx-eyed Bessie Delmar, who told Budd that Bronson, her playwright-husband, was in a frenzy over the last lines of their play. Talk was interrupted by Herb, general handyman for the group, beating loudly on a drum to rouse the colonists for their daily swim. A shark, pet of the natives from the nearby Hawaiian village, forces the colonists to confine their swimming to a beautiful, natural pool. Hoyt senses an intrigue, when Bronson Delmar places his arm about Josephine West. Despite her good-looking husband's obvious irritation, Turva Massie, whose dark beauty is marred by a long scar on her right cheek, chides the Delmars because they won't divulge the theme of their play. Quiet mannered Dr. Latham and his elderly, outspoken mother register alarm when Elaine, an exquisite blonde, asks Hoyt if he recalls ever seeing her in the States. That evening, Hoyt approaches the group on Budd's porch but hesitates to interrupt Delmar's eulogy of his own opus. Hoyt is telling the story.

CHAPTER FIVE

"And when my play gets to Broadway," Delmar proclaimed, "it's good for a record run. I expect a lot of people to thinking too." He looked around the circle and laughed unpleasantly. "A theme like this!" He whacked the rolled manuscript on his bare leg.

Budd sat up suddenly. "If that really is your theme—and not just your drunken version of it—I say it's desirable for you to use such a plot." His usually suave voice rose from disgust to anger. "And why do you keep calling it your play? Haven't Bessie worked even harder than you have on it?"

Turva Massie jumped to her feet. At the moment screening my view of Mrs. Delmar's face, and flashed these light eyes indignantly at Delmar. "It's—it's small of you! I hate credit stealers!"

Delmar turned, lurching slightly, and for the first time I saw that he had been drinking too much. Grinning fatuously, he reached as if to grab Turva under the chin but she dodged quickly.

"Oh, come now," he said, "don't be a feminist! Bessie's been a help, but you all know it's my idea. It's my play."

Mrs. Delmar sprang up behind Turva. She didn't look now as if she'd been licking the cream—she was a cat meeting a canine foe. I fancied that her back arched as she peered. She snatched the manuscript and flicked it open, then turned on Delmar, her eyes gleaming.

Capt. W. F. Whitenack Takes Bride; Military Ceremony

DOYLESTOWN, Mar. 27—A military wedding of interest took place here yesterday afternoon at three o'clock at the home of the Rev. and Mrs. George M. Whitenack, Jr., Lower State Rd., Doylestown Township, when their son, Capt. William F. Whitenack, Camp Lee, Va., and Miss Frances E. Blakey, of Petersburg, Va., were married.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Yelverton Cowherd Blakey, of Spanardsville, Va., and the groom is Adjutant of the 6th Quartermaster Regiment, Camp Lee, Va.

Capt. Whitenack was a former football star at Doylestown high school, University of North Carolina and Pennsylvania Military College. He was stationed at the Schuylkill Arsenal, Philadelphia, when he enlisted in 1939.

The ceremony was performed by Capt. Whitenack's father, the Rev. Mr. Whitenack, former pastor of Doylestown Presbyterian Church, in the presence of a few friends. A sister of the groom, Miss Helen Whitenack, was the bridesmaid; and a brother of the groom, Mr. David Whitenack, was best man.

After a wedding trip to New York and Virginia, Capt. and Mrs. Whitenack will reside at Petersburg, Va.

The bride attended the University of Virginia and is a dental technician and nurse at Camp Lee.

Today's Quiet Moment

(By the Rev. James R. Gailey)

Pastor, Bristol Presbyterian Church

Make us mindful, O God, of the needs of the world. Thou hast told us to live above the world, but at the same time to make the world a better place because of our having passed this way. So fill us with the spirit of Love that we might have compassion, even as Christ did, upon the human race—whether represented by our friends or foes, our allies or our enemies. Grant that the present world conflict may not blind us to the fact that we have a responsibility toward all peoples everywhere, and the burden rests upon thy Church to fulfill its obligation. Through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

ON THE SCREENS

GRAND THEATRE

The Hardy Family, with irreplaceable Mickey Rooney in a myriad of comical troubles, returns to the Grand Theatre in "Andy Hardy's Double Life," commencing Sunday at the Grand Theatre. Mickey as the ebullient Andy Hardy is faced with a breach of promise suit that turns out to be a "frame" and otherwise is in hot water generally until he finally gets started for college.

As in the case of several of the Hardy pictures, the new one introduces a glamorous new personality in Esther Williams, national swimming champion turned actress.

BRISTOL THEATRE

"Tops all others in all its terrifying aspects," is the heralded critical opinion expressed on all sides concerning the new Bela Lugosi starter, "Bowery at Midnight," due to start its shuddery showings Sunday and Monday at the

Bristol Theatre.

Hit No. 2 is the action thriller, "Invisible Stripes," starring George Raft and Humphrey Bogart. A story of a reformed convict's attempt to go straight.

RITZ THEATRE

Novel dancing routines attracting favorable comment by audiences at the Ritz Theatre where "When Johnny Comes Marching Home" is the current screenfare, were staged by the well-known Louis Du Pron.

Co-stars Gloria Jean, Peggy Ryan, Donald O'Connor and the Four Step Brothers are seen in the dancing sequences which highlight the movie's colorful romantic plot.

COMISKEY GIVES SOFT LIFE

THE COLD SHOULDER

By John Cashman
(I. N. S. Sports Writer)

NEW YORK, Mar. 27 — (INS) — A young Irish-American foundry worker, who rose to prominence as a great heavyweight prospect then slipped to obscurity when he translated his fists into wine, women and motors, may yet achieve the goal he saw before his eyes became blurred with fast living.

Pat Comiskey was barely 16 years old when he was taken out of a Paterson, N. J., iron foundry by Bill Daly in 1927, and started on a streak of wins that excited favorable comment in fight circles, especially among the Celtic neighbors. He had a powerful right hand, a busy, aggressive style, and he soon piled up an enviable string of knockouts. He won all of his five fights in 1928 via the slimmer route. In 1929, he amassed 17 knockouts, drew two decisions and one draw, and lost the nod but once, to Steve Dudas.

Comiskey trained faithfully, spurred on by Daly with visions of the heavyweight title. He eschewed the softer life, kept to himself, and eased into the big money.

Then in 1940, he succumbed to the lure of bar rooms, fast cars and charming company.

After putting to sleep in one round the Dudas who had declined him only six months before, and following this up with two more quick K.O.'s for the books, the astute Jack Kearns moved Comiskey into a shining opportunity . . . a match with Max Baer. Comiskey was being touted as an opponent for Joe Louis should he beat Baer, but this short-cut to the title was closed when Baer put the Irishman down and out in the first round. This was a surprise to Comiskey's followers, but not to Daly, who knew Pat had taken the road downward before he ever went into the ring with Baer.

But Comiskey's chances weren't erased . . . not entirely. Mike Jacobs matched him with Lou Nova four months after the Baer fight. Nova had then just emerged from a year-long battle with septic poisoning in a West Coast sanitarium, and was anxious for a ring trial. The Paterson boy thrived early in this fight, and Nova punched him around at will, giving him the worst beating he had ever taken.

Comiskey was apparently washed up . . . at 19.

Although Comiskey continued his knockout string over a succession of minor ring figures, he seemed to go to pieces in private life. He was seen too frequently in Jersey bar rooms, and did his roadwork in a roadster. After two speeding convictions, his license was revoked when he was discovered speeding down the main stem in Paterson at 70. Late in 1941, he figured in two accidents in six weeks. He fell off a motorcycle, suffering hand, leg and shoulder injuries, then fractured a thigh when a car he was driving collided with a tractor.

After this Comiskey announced his intentions of earnestly keeping to rigid restrictions in order to once again earn a shot at the title. At the time of his widest flings he was still in his teens, but whether it was his vehicular brushes with death or the tempering of time that brought about his "reformation," no one knows. At any rate, he mended well and went into training . . . serious training.

In a fight last year with Big Boy Brown, the shoulder Comiskey had injured in the motorcycle accident kept snapping out of place. Between rounds Comiskey gamely allowed Daly to ease it back, and the Irishman went on to get the nod.

After this, Comiskey knocked out the highly regarded Wallace Cross, in addition to a couple of lesser luminaries.

Last week, he picked himself up off the canvas to decision Jimmy Corallo, the hard-hitting young ex-Golden Gloves heavy champ, who himself gained notice for his savage bouts with the Texan, Sanders Cox.

Comiskey is only 22, can hit like a trip-hammer, and has learned what is good for him and what is bad . . . something some fighters wouldn't learn if they lived to be ninety. Will he justify the faith so many fans placed in him early in his career? Only time, which taught him so many valuable lessons, can tell.

covered ridges whose tips just catch the invisible sun. A look-a-lake was connected to "broadhead" the races to the destroyers. A service rifle became the starting gun.

The "E" and "I" raced three times around the harbor, then torpedoed, then veteran three-hundred-ton "E" and the "I" lost all three. Revenge came in a "scuttie race" that evening when the "E" officers were guests on the "I." The course: out on a small hatch on the starboard side of the destroyer, up the slider side of the destroyer to the quarterdeck, across it and over the port edge to drop down (through the wardroom's port scuttie) calling for a neat bit of trapeze work over the water. The "E" won both races handily, first between the midshipmen, then a relay, although the "I" claimed our runner should have been disqualified for losing his trousers as he flashed out through the hatch.

Dinner in harbor, particularly if there were indications of sailing the next day, was usually semi-formal. There was no way of telling when there would be opportunity for another festive occasion together. So the wardroom officers ate together, instead of according to their watches, and bowties and even a few wing collars appeared. There were toasts to the King, and because of the American correspondent and two Russians on board to Roosevelt, and Stalin. The toasts were drunk, seated, a custom dating back to the day when George II was majestically angered by bumping his head on a low ceiling as he rose for a toast in a warship wardroom. And the evening finished off with bridge and blackjack games.

"The destroyers always seem to make the best of their spare time, probably because they have so little. There was a later occasion in a North Russian port, when four British destroyers, probably puzzled the Russians by holding competitive evolutions which were half games, half drill.

At a signal from the leading destroyer, each commanding officer opened a numbered, sealed envelope giving an order, then raced the other destroyers to complete the exercise. One favorite for this drill which we expected but which did not come was "All officers killed or wounded; midshipmen take command and carry on evolutions." But there were others which carried on the playful spirit throughout. Midway through the competition the leading destroyer hoisted a signal, "Optional, hands to bathe over the side." The "E's" first lieutenant almost had a taker on his offer of five shillings to the first man in the water (temperature 38 Fahrenheit). Over a 50-minute period these were the orders.

Stoker crew to man whaler and take demolition party to nearest destroyer.

The "E" should have had her stokers race in Iceland; they were easily the best of the four stoker crews.)

10's hand captain. (For weighing anchor by manpower.) Rig and man additional crew—nest. (A handy bar—made fast, with a sailor jumping into it. Last ship five degrees to starboard. This is usually done by shifting fuel and water from tank to tank; unfortunately, the "E's" tanks had all just been "topped off." She already listed six degrees to port and couldn't get over to starboard.)

Place collision mat over the side at designated point. Rig after steering wheel. Rig emergency aerial. (This came up for the list to port—"E" had crossed the order and had the aerial only for raising.) Rig 10-inch signal light on X-gun platform, and use it as signal "evolution completed." (A command saved our skins here. The "E" had no electric outlet on X-gun platform, so he took the back of the head light, stuck a portable lamp in, and signaled with that.)

Prepare to tow aft. Lay out buoy. Send water manned by ordinary seaman with first-aid party to nearest ship. Provide tow forward. Burn searchlight on leading destroyer. Rig sounding boom. Send Diesel fire-fighting party to nearest ship. Take away rigging anchor. (A small auxiliary anchor dropped by small boat away from the destroyer, so that the destroyer can pull itself to a new position by hauling in the cable.)

Fire in tiller flat, rig and operate three fire hoses. "Prepare to abandon ship."

On the final order, climbing nets were dropped over the side, secret and confidential papers gathered on the bridge for destruction or to be taken over the side, boats were made ready and flares and floats cleared for use when all hands appeared on the upper decks in flannels. Then the drill was completed.

As each order had been executed, the destroyer hoisted a signal which already been sent on for hoisting, while the officers on the bridge watched the other destroyers to see which one had their corresponding signals up. (The "E" and the leading destroyer tied for top score.) Evolutions completed, the officers gathered aboard the leader to work out the score and discuss shortcuts invented.

Twenty hours later we were back at sea again. The exercises continued: Action stations! For exercise. Alarm. "Port" Enemy in sight bearing 070 degrees, range 7,000. For exercise. Open Fire! It still was practice, but this time it had a grimmer purpose. The entertainments were over.

To Open Pledge Drive For New Legion Home

The Rev. Albert W. Eastburn, another member of the home committee, gave it as his opinion that a "crying need of the community is a place where men and boys can come together." He added that "We should put this thing across—not for ourselves—but for the youth by the hundreds and thousands who are coming back. We should have a place to offer them for their benefit and pleasure, and thus help to guard against the breeding of crime."

Joseph Zaiot, another committee man, told of enthusiasm noted on the part of the public, with many non-members of the post and auxiliary promising donations.

Mr. Thomas outlined plans to raise funds for such purchase if deemed advisable, using the subscription method and other means. The cost of maintenance of the building, if secured, was also considered, it being mentioned that upkeep costs could easily be maintained when the Legion has a home of its own to conduct various affairs when it desires.

Frank Vogenberger mentioned that although response of post members to the idea was excellent at first it has lagged recently.

Attention was called to the fact that although 250 or more invitations were mailed to post and auxiliary members to attend last night's session, only 39 were present.

Mrs. Harry Friedrich gave the opinion voiced by a local banker that "Such a purchase would be one of the most wonderful things to happen to this borough."

Another spokesman, Roscoe L. Horner, stated that he felt several questions in connection with possible acquisition of such a home have been ironed out, and that now he is hearing more favorable comment. "Co-operation and union in thought and purpose is shown at committee meetings," he added.

Mr. Thomas voiced his opinion that "like warm support on the part of some post members is possibly due to several plans under consideration in the past. Naturally some find it difficult to give up their own plans," he stated. "But I feel the Legion and the community are large enough to have a meeting place such as considered—one to be proud of. I feel the majority of the people are in favor of it."

Ernest Robinson expressed the opinion that the place under consideration, is "A wonderful buy. It will be hard work to secure it. But we can do it."

Mr. Randall asked for volunteers to canvass the communities of this section. While canvassing the workers will inquire of every householder whether anyone from that home is in service, securing the names of the individuals and the branch of service, thus providing a complete record.

Those pledging will also be asked if they will be willing, should the present property under consideration not be purchased, to let their pledges stand for purchase of any other structure at a later date.

Operations Against Mareth Line Proceed As Scheduled

Allied Headquarters in North Africa—Operations of the British Eighth Army against German positions within the Mareth Line "are proceeding according to plan," an official communique from Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower announced today.

Stiff enemy resistance was acknowledged, but it was apparent that Gen. Bernard L. Montgomery's crack forces have driven wedges into the German positions. A small number of enemy planes staged a night raid on Algiers. There was heavy anti-aircraft fire. Some damage was done.

Germans Claim Russian Attack Repulsed

Berlin—By Official German Wireless—The German High Command claimed today that a Russian attack on the northern area of the Kuban bridgehead had been repulsed and said numerous enemy tanks had been destroyed.

In middle and southern Tunisia numerically superior forces made new and strong attacks on German and Italian positions, the statement admitted, but claimed the Allies were repulsed after fierce fighting.

Royal Air Force bomber raids on "several places in western Germany" were admitted. As usual, the communique said "the population suffered casualties."

This Victory Garden Yielded a Bountiful Harvest in 60 Days

Top—Garden made by James H. Burdett, at Homewood, Ill., as it appeared June 15, 1942. To left: Same garden May 1, after all hardy crops had been sown. Above: Diagram of garden layout.

Government authorities urge that Victory Gardens should cover an area of at least 2,000 feet. An idea of the crops that can be grown in approximately this space is given by the experience with a garden 2,000 feet made last year.

The garden faced east and enjoyed full sun all day. It was surrounded by a picket fence, on which lima beans, cucumbers and tomatoes could be trained. A wire or picket fence is the ideal boundary for the vegetable plot, far better than a hedge, shrubbery border or wall. It allows air to circulate freely, which helps destroy fungi and mildews, and a fence far less costly to compete with your crops for food.

It is vital that a vegetable plot shall have at least six hours' sun a day and the soil be free from the roots of trees and shrubs.

Rows in the garden ran north and south, which gave the most equal distribution of sunshine. The rows were short, which enabled plantings to be divided easily to produce continuous crops of early harvest vegetables. Short rows also make cultivation easier, as the gardener gets a rest at the end of each row. Where cultivation is by hand there is no gain in efficiency from long rows.
